Preface

Greater Hickory, North Carolina
Population 14,000

The name "Greater Hickory" has been used in designating the community which is made up of Hickory, Highland, West Hickory, Longview and Brookford. The five municipalities are all close together and are one in practically everything except government. Three of the cities are served by the one water department and enjoy the protection of the Hickory Fire Department.

Greater Hickory is an industrial center. There are over sixty industries of a diversified character located in the five municipalities. The products of the manufacturing plants consist of textiles, hosiery, furniture, woodenware and many other items that are the product of the farm and forest.

The growth of Greater Hickory has been rapid and has been created by the ever increasing development of its industries.

Greater Hickory is happily situated at the gateway of "the land of the sky" and while it is on the edge of the great Piedmont plateau, it is within easy distance of the mountains. Blowing Rock, the famous resort located at an elevation of 4500 feet above sea level and 3300 feet above Greater Hickory, is only 42 miles distant.

This preface would not be complete without a word in connection with the development of agriculture of the surrounding farm district. Catawba county known far and wide for its famous Jersey herds, is rapidly taking the lead in poultry culture. It is also prosperous along all lines of farming as indicated by the fact that seventy-five per cent of the farmers of the county, own their farms.
